Market Comment

Local equities posted a good recovery. Yet the mkt is still trading below its 200-day MOV (65,434) and needs further cash inflow to rise above it. We expect a flat to neg. opening following yesterday's rise and drop in global mkts. The tech. reaction still has room up to the 200-day MOV. Res. @ 65,000 and 65.434. Sub. @ 64.000 and 63.200.

What the Day Heralds

May Capacity Utilization... The capacity utilization rate (CUR) rose by 1.9 points y/y to 75.2% in May, thus, exceeding the 2010 average CUR of 72.6%. CUR of around 75% implies that current levels are still low compared to pre-crisis levels. May's figure signals that inflationary pressures may start to kick in during the upcoming period when CUR exceeds the pre-crisis average for 2008 of around 79%. Seasonally-adjusted capacity utilization was realized at 74.8%, hence lower than the April 2010 level of 75.9%.

According to the main industry groupings, durables declined by 1.2%, while intermediate goods remained flat at 0.6% and investment goods displayed annual growth of 6% in May. However, non-durables and consumer goods remained flat, while food & beverages displayed an annual contraction of 0.7%.

Comment: The continued monthly increase in CUR means that economic activity is at full speed, and therefore contributing positively to economic growth. Healthy CUR combined with widening credit growth is likely to pressure inflationary dynamics in the upcoming periods. In an effort to curb these pressures, to limit widening credit growth and to a curb widening current account deficit, the CBT recently increased reserve requirements on both TL and FX-denominated deposits, and seems determined to take further related actions. However, we do not expect the Bank to rush at rate hikes until capacity utilization reaches its pre-crisis levels. (See our Macro Note: - Capacity Utilization: Strong but not at Pre-crisis level, of May 24).

RWE plans to increase presence in Turkish market... RWE Turkey CEO Andreas Radmacher has stated that a € 160 bn investment is needed over 20 years in order to meet electricity demand growth. He expressed their willingness to capture a slice of the growing local market, so long as it becomes more secure and deeper without revealing their own investment target. Additionally, he stated RWE's interest in the Baskent NG DisCo, and the production & distribution assets of Akenerji <AKENR TI>. Currently, RWE and Turcas are establishing a 775 MW natural gas fired combined cycle power plant in Denizli, Turkey.

Firms participating in electricity grid privatizations demand additional period... Six of the 7 firms to have submitted the highest bids in the electricity grid privatizations have demanded an additional period, while Park Elektrik has withdrew from the privatization of the Mediterranean Distribution grid, forfeiting US$ 10mn in assurance. Yet, the company has maintained its existing rights in the Bogazici and Toroslar distribution grids, where it submitted the third and second best offers, respectively.

Sabanci Holding <SAHOL TI> subsidiary Enerjisa may take over Akdeniz electricity distribution operations...

According to a statement made by Energy Minister Mr. Yildiz, Enerjisa (a 50-50 JV between Sabanci Holding and Verbund) is to continue with the takeover process of the Akdeniz electricity distribution tender, following the decision of the highest bidder, Park Holding, to withdraw.

At the next stage, official notification from the Privatization High Council will be sent to Sabanci Holding. The management has expressed serious interest in Akdeniz electricity Distribution Company.

Note that at the tender held back in December 2010, Park Holding was the best bidder with a US$ 1,165 mn price tag, while Enerjisa was second best with its offer of US$ 1,128 mn. The Akdeniz region has 1.5 mn subscribers consuming 6.6 TWh of electricity.

Enerjisa already operates Baskent electricity distribution operations (3.1 mn subscribers & 12.2 TWh electricity consumption), and aims to increase its exposure to distribution business. However today's news flow does not mean a definite takeover of Akdeniz DisCo at the current stage, and yet the company will be seriously interested in acquiring the region's operating rights.
